The Hockaday Museum's Traveling Medicine Show school outreach program provides authentic Indian education through primary source instructors (Blackfeet Indian presenters), objects (artifacts made and used by Northern Plains Indian Tribes), and activities (games, dance, music, crafts, tool-making, language, cooking).

Goals of the Traveling Medicine Show are to:

- Synchronize Hockaday Education outreach and school curriculum requirements
- Cultivate the Hockaday Museum's excellent relationship with the Blackfeet Indian Nation
- Make living art experiences available for students without such opportunities
- Serve as a fundamental resource in the implementation of Indian Education for All
- Provide cross-cultural enlightenment, clarification and enrichment for all participants
- Encourage the preservation and creation of art, artifacts, and cultural records unique to the Blackfeet and other Northern Plains Indian Nations
- Advance understanding and respect for all Montana peoples and cultures.

In its first three months the Traveling Medicine Show visited a total of 2,500 children and adults in twelve schools. Everywhere it went, it was a resounding success! If we are able to secure adequate project funding for academic year 2007-2008, the Show will travel to 5,000 children and adults in twenty-five schools.

Program Sponsors

Funding (grant monies) for the Traveling Medicine Show Indian Education for All outreach program has been awarded by the Woodcock Foundation for the Appreciation of Arts, Montana Office of Public Instruction, and the Montana Historical Society.

Annual Fund Drive

The Hockaday Museum of Art is vitalized and enriched by the participation and support of its patrons. Membership contributions help support daily Museum operations; but it is the Annual Fund that enables us to surpass being very good, in favor of becoming exceptional. Your donation to the Annual Fund provides the resources to bring preeminent artists, exhibitions and programs to the community.

With your help, the Hockaday Museum can be the gold standard for arts, art education and art events. Please make the Annual Fund a priority in your giving this year. Call us for more information, or simply mail your donation to the Hockaday Museum and note "Attention Annual Fund Drive." Thank you!
