About the Hockaday Museum

The Hockaday Museum of Art was established in 1968 by local artists and is today a leading public art museum and cultural resource for the Flathead Valley and regions beyond. The Museum contributes appreciably to regional tourism, economy and quality of life for the community and state.

The Hockaday preserves and promotes Montana's artistic legacy through curatorial concentration on the significant art, artists, and authors of Montana and Glacier National Park. One of the nation's largest permanent collections of historic and contemporary Glacier National Park art, the Hockaday is the only Montana Museum with a major focus on Glacier Park, and the art and culture of the Blackfoot Indians. Our permanent collection is assessed at $1.3+ million and holds more than 600 catalogued items.

Rotating and traveling exhibitions showcase the work of nationally celebrated and locally acclaimed artists, and offer a deeper examination of Montana's art, culture and history.

Children delight in the Discovery Gallery, where hands-on activities follow current exhibit themes.

Trained, volunteer docents lead enlightening Museum tours for visitors and students of all ages.

The Hockaday's "Off the Wall" Gift Gallery is a charming source of unique pottery, jewelry, cards, prints, books, and other original handwork by local and regional artists.
